

The Guide

EXHIBITION

Bluewall Gallery is a new, privately-owned space in Corracanvy, ten kilometres from Cavan town, which will exhibit contemporary visual art.

Its programme presents a broad range of original artwork by both established and emerging artists working in a variety of media. The gallery has been converted from the owner's art studio, which overlooks landscaped gardens and Lough Oughter, and comprises three exhibition spaces and an outdoor sculpture garden.

The gallery's first show, called Breath, will open next Saturday. Among the featured work is Marianne Keating's screenprint called girl 2 (pictured right); painting by Gabhann Dunne; photography and video by Michael Fortune; Alison Kay's ceramics; sculpture by Eileen McDonagh; and 'actions and encounters' performed by artist Brian Connolly at the opening show.

Of the range of work which will be on show, gallery owner Joe Keenan says: "We chose these artists for our opening show Breath – literally the gallery's first breath – as we wished to give people an idea of the quality and range of work we intend showing at Bluewall Gallery in the future."
